

A GUIDE FROM ZERO

What makes Investec stand out

The business model, the structure, the values and the relationship ethos: what Investec actually does differently, how it is wired into pay and risk, and where it is ordinary. No prior knowledge assumed.

THE ONE-SENTENCE ANSWER

"Investec chooses a narrow set of ambitious clients, serves the person and their business through one banker, and backs that with pay and credit rules that reward long-term, risk-aware client work. The open question is whether that model can lift UK returns to its targets by 2030."

Does Investec sell, or build relationships? Both, in a set order. It picks its clients carefully, gives each one a named banker and fast, human lending decisions, and then grows its share of that client's business. Its own job adverts set revenue and "wallet share" targets for bankers Confirmed [S10, S11].

Is "relationship banking" what makes it different? No. At least four UK rivals say almost the same thing [C/R] [S26, S28, S29, S30]. What is rare is the bundle: a private bank, a mid-market corporate lender, the top-ranked small and mid-cap stockbroker and a large stake in wealth manager Rathbones, all inside one mid-sized firm Inferred .

Where does the ethos actually live? In the plumbing. Bonuses come from profit after a charge for the capital used, not from sales volume. Big bonuses are paid years later in shares and can be taken back. Most staff own shares. One independent "no" stops a loan Confirmed [S6, S7, S8]. Many banks say they build relationships. Investec pays for them Inferred .

What is the catch? The model is expensive. The UK bank's costs are 54% of its income, against 26% to 36% at leaner rivals, and its UK returns trail Shawbrook, Coutts and Barclays' private bank Confirmed [S1, S31, S32, S33, S34, S35].

Five things that really stand out	Two things not to claim
1. The bundle: lend to a founder's company, broke its shares and bank the founder, in one firm	"Investec is unique because it does relationship banking"
2. Private clients chosen for building wealth, not holding it	"Investec never sells" or "has no sales targets"
3. Bonus pools from risk-adjusted profit (EVA), deferred and clawable
4. Unanimous credit committees, a habit dating back to the founders' veto
5. A deliberate bet on "smart humans on tap, not chatbots"

How to read the tags: Confirmed read in a primary document such as Investec's results, annual report or job advert. Reported from the press, a third party or a search snippet. Inferred the author's reasoning from the evidence. [S1] etc. resolve in the source list at the back.

PART 1

Banking from zero

Five minutes of background so the rest makes sense.

What a bank does

A bank takes in deposits, money that people and companies leave with it, and lends that money out at a higher interest rate. The gap between the interest it earns on loans and the interest it pays on deposits is net interest income. Banks also earn fees for advice, for helping companies raise money, for hedging and for payments. From that income they pay their staff and systems and cover loans that are never repaid. What is left is profit.

Illustrative rates only. What is left after costs and bad loans is profit.

Illustrative rates Inferred. Investec's real numbers are on the next pages.

Four words you will meet

KEY TERM

Private bank: a bank for wealthy or high-earning individuals, offering tailored loans and a named banker rather than standard products.

KEY TERM

Mid-market company: an established business too big for small-business banking but too small for global investment banks. Investec's UK corporate bank targets roughly £10m to £250m of annual turnover Reported [S11].

KEY TERM

Relationship manager (RM): the single named banker responsible for a client. The client calls one person, and the RM brings in specialists.

KEY TERM

Corporate broker: a listed company's ongoing stock-market adviser, which helps it raise money from investors and keeps it connected to fund managers.

PART 2

What Investec is, and how it is built

A South African start-up that became a two-part specialist bank.

Where it came from

Investec started in Johannesburg in 1974 as a small leasing and finance company called "Investors, Technical and Executors" Reported [S2]. Leasing means renting out equipment in return for regular payments. It got a banking licence around 1980 and came to the UK in 1992 Reported [S2]. Sources list the founders differently, so the safe line is "a small group led by Ian Kantor, later joined by Bernard Kantor and Stephen Koseff".

The logo is a zebra. Investec links it to its South African roots and to "restless spirits", people "dissatisfied with the status quo" Reported [S44].

Two companies run as one, with a wall in the middle

Since July 2002 Investec has been a dual-listed company (DLC): two separate companies, each listed on its own stock exchange, that agree by contract to act as one business Confirmed [S1]. Investec plc (London) owns the UK bank. Investec Limited (Johannesburg) owns the South African bank. The group "operates as if it is a single unified economic enterprise", but there are "no cross-guarantees between the companies" Confirmed [S3], and "capital and liquidity are prohibited from flowing between the two entities" Confirmed [S4].

Sources: S1, S3, S4 (Confirmed). The UK bank is Investec Bank plc, 30 Gresham Street, London.

In plain English: the UK bank must stand on its own feet. It has its own board and its own risk and pay committees Confirmed [S6]. It also measures risk with a simpler, more cautious method than the South African bank, so it holds more capital for every pound it lends. That is one reason UK returns trail South Africa Inferred.

How the money is made

In the year to 31 March 2026 the group earned £2,281.4m of revenue. About 59% was net interest income and 41% was fees and other income; fees and commissions grew 14.7% to £506.0m. Adjusted operating profit was £951.0m and return on equity (profit per pound of shareholders' money) was 13.6% Confirmed [S1]. The UK specialist bank made £401.6m, down 2.1%, with £17.8bn of loans, £22.5bn of deposits and costs equal to 54.0% of income Confirmed [S1].

The UK businesses

Sources: S16 (private clients, Reported), S11 and S19 (corporate bank), S1 (specialist lending, Rathbones), S21 and S50 (broking), S22 (Save), S45 and S46 (Rathbones).

Rathbones needs a word. In September 2023 Investec swapped its UK wealth management business for shares in Rathbones, a listed wealth manager Confirmed [S46]. Investec now owns 41.25% of the economic value, with votes capped at 29.9% Reported [S45]. Rathbones contributed £76.6m to Investec's profit in FY26 Confirmed [S1].

PART 3

The ethos: what Investec says it stands for

Purpose, values, and the founders' veto that still shapes how decisions are made.

Purpose and values, in its own words

The purpose today is short: "Our purpose is to create enduring worth" Confirmed [S5]. "Enduring worth" means value that lasts, rather than a quick profit. In 2021 the line was longer: "to create enduring worth, living in, not off, society" Confirmed [S4]. That phrase now sits among the values. It means a bank should give something back to the communities its profits come from Confirmed [S5].

The brand line is "Out of the Ordinary" Confirmed [S4].

Same ideas, new wording. Safe line: "four long-standing values, now written as ten statements."

Sources: S3 (2019), S4 (2021), S5 (2026). All Confirmed from Investec's own reports.

The 2019 wording of Client focus is the most vivid: "We break china for the client, having the tenacity and confidence to challenge convention" Confirmed [S3]. "Breaking china" means being willing to upset normal procedures to get the client the right result.

Choosing not to be everything to everyone

THE KEY SENTENCE

"We do not seek to be all things to all people. Our aim is to build well-defined, value-adding businesses focused on serving the needs of select market niches." Investec Limited Annual Report 2026 [S5], with almost identical words in 2019 [S3].

This is the bridge between the ethos and the business model. A niche is a small, specialised corner of a market. Investec deliberately serves a few client types deeply, rather than everyone a little Confirmed [S5].

Where the culture came from: every founder had a veto

Ian Kantor: "Every one of the founders at the time had veto power and could use it on anything." And: "This thing of 'you can do anything you like as long as there is consensus' became the basis of Investec's culture" Reported [S2]. A veto is the right to block a decision on your own.

One "no" can stop a decision: the founding habit survives in how loans are approved.

Sources: S2 (Reported), S5 (Confirmed), S6 (Confirmed). Link between the three is the author's inference.

Sources: S2, S5, S6.

How the culture is meant to work day to day

Investec has called its culture its "strategic differentiator": "We have a flat structure and meritocratic approach and uphold an environment that encourages self-starters to drive their careers" Confirmed [S3]. A flat structure has few layers of management. Meritocratic means people progress on results rather than seniority.

The UK bank's 2026 accounts say the culture is "defined by material ownership, freedom to operate with accountability and open and honest dialogue" Confirmed [S12]. Chief executive Fani Titi on the owner mindset: "as an owner, if you act like an owner and you walk into your home and there is something amiss you act immediately" Reported [S13].

The social side follows the same logic

Investec says sustainability should be "an integral part of our business rather than a peripheral consideration", and reports seven years of carbon-neutral own operations and coal at 0.09% of loans Confirmed [S5]. In London it has run Beyond Business, an incubator for social enterprises, with the Bromley by Bow Centre since 2011 Reported. In South Africa, Promaths supports maths and science pupils Confirmed [S4]. Both back education and founders rather than simple charity, which mirrors the business itself Inferred.

DON'T SAY THIS

Do not quote "we do not do business at any cost", or Koseff lines such as "anyone can talk to anyone" or "cowboys on the hill". None could be verified in an original source.

PART 4

Do they sell, or build relationships?

Both, in a set order. Here is how the order shows up in each business.

Investec's job adverts are frank. A UK Private Client Relationship Manager must find "opportunities to increase wallet share across lending, FX, investments, wealth management" and is measured on "growth, engagement and commercial performance objectives" Confirmed [S10]. Wallet share is the portion of a client's total banking that one bank captures. So yes, Investec sells. But Titi frames returns as "the consequence or perhaps the reward" of doing "right by our clients and do that long term" Reported [S13].

Relationship first, revenue second. Investec does sell, but in this order.

Author's synthesis Inferred of S5, S10, S11, S17, S18.

Private Bank: a human decides, and the banker becomes the hub

The UK Private Bank serves about 8,200 clients and plans to add about 5,000 Reported [S16] (City AM reported a bigger target of 16,000 households Reported [S14]; the sources conflict). Typical clients earn £300,000 or more or have net worth of £3m or more Reported [S18].

The client choice is deliberate. Ryan Tholet, then head of the UK private bank, in 2018: "We are not always especially useful to high net worth individuals who are simply looking to preserve their wealth" Reported [S17]. Investec targets people building wealth: executives, entrepreneurs, finance professionals.

Decisions are made by people. A broker guide says Investec does "not use standard credit scorecards" and that "every application is assessed by a dedicated Private Banker who looks at your global wealth and future earning potential", counting bonuses, profit shares and trust income Reported [S18]. A credit scorecard is the automated points system most high-street banks use to approve loans.

In May 2026 Investec announced a move "from a specialist lender to a full-service primary bank", adding current accounts, its first UK credit card and rewards Reported [S20]. Tholet: "Our shift from mortgage banker to relationship manager enables a greater offering at the source of any lending, increasing our relevance" Reported [S14]. Titi set a standard: "if a client calls in, the phone should not ring for more than three rings" Reported [S14].

Rathbones: from passing on referrals to owning the advice

Investec is "evolving our strategic partnership from a referral-based model to an integrated assets-under-advice model. Investec will now lead the client relationship and advice, with Rathbones providing underlying investment capabilities" Confirmed [S1]. The client talks to Investec; Rathbones runs the money in the background. Investec keeps the relationship rather than handing it away Inferred.

Mid-market corporate bank: "corporate banking that feels like private banking"

In November 2025 Investec said it would build "transactional banking, a dedicated team of relationship managers and intuitive digital platforms", aiming for 1,000 mid-market relationships by FY2030 with more than 40 relationship managers Reported [S19, S48]. That is roughly 25 companies per banker, very few by high-street standards Inferred. Head of corporate banking Andy Hart: the aim is to "bring a private client banking experience to UK mid-market corporates" Reported [S15].

The Relationship Director advert asks for a "proactive, trusted advisor" who connects clients "to the full breadth of Investec's expertise" and partners "with Private Client teams when personal and business needs intersect". The same advert measures "new-to-bank growth, revenue, product penetration and portfolio quality" Confirmed [S11]. Selling and loan quality sit side by side.

"partnering with Private Client teams when personal and business needs intersect" (job advert, S11)

Author's illustration Inferred of S1, S11, S15. Investec publishes no figure for how many UK clients use more than one of its businesses.

Specialist lending, broking and savings

- Specialist lending. Niche teams in fund finance, aviation, real estate, energy and infrastructure. Fund Solutions says "one size does not fit all" and stresses "long-term relationships built on trust" Reported [S49]. No repeat-client figures are published, so this rests on Investec's own language Inferred.
- Corporate broking. Investec acts for "over 100 public companies" Reported [S50] and in June 2026 was ranked #1 UK small and mid-cap broker for the fourth year running, voted by 248 fund managers and analysts Confirmed [S21]. Because investors cast the votes, the ranking measures Investec's relationships with the buyers of shares Inferred.
- Investec Save: the exception. Online savings sold on rate, directly and through platforms like Raisin, with no personal banker Reported [S22]. Trustpilot: 4.7 out of 5 on 6,302 reviews, with praise for "no faff" and complaints of "no way to talk to anyone in person" [C, anecdote] [S23].

PART 5

The plumbing: how pay and rules make it stick

Values on a wall do not change behaviour. Pay and approval rules do.

Bonuses come from risk-adjusted profit, not sales volume

Investec Bank plc funds bonus pools from Economic Value Added (EVA): "the Bank-wide risk adjusted Economic Value Added (EVA) model which is, at a high level, based on revenue less risk adjusted costs, and overall affordability" Confirmed [S6]. EVA is profit minus a charge for the capital tied up in earning it. A bonus pool is the total pot a team shares.

It is literal. In Brogden & Reid v Investec Bank plc (2016), two bankers' bonuses were set as a share of their desk's EVA. The desk made an EVA loss, so no bonus was paid, and the Court of Appeal backed the bank Confirmed [S8]. The system is still live: a 2026 advert asks the reward manager to "co-ordinate the EVA bonus pool and Long-Term Share Awards" Confirmed [S9].

Two teams, same revenue. Which one earns a bonus?

Illustrative numbers. Real case: in Brogden v Investec (2016) a desk with negative EVA received no bonus [S8].

Illustrative numbers Inferred. EVA method: S6 (Confirmed); court case: S8 (Confirmed).

Individual shares of the pot weigh "client outcomes", "attitude displayed towards risk consciousness", "treating customers fairly", "the ability to grow and develop markets and client relationships", "multi-year contribution" and "specific input from the risk and compliance functions" Confirmed [S6]. No source says Investec "does not pay on sales". The evidence is the design, not a stated ban.

Bonuses are paid late, in shares, and can be taken back

For most staff, 60% of a bonus above a set level is deferred, paid over about three years. For senior staff whose jobs can change the bank's risk, deferral runs four to seven years. "All variable remuneration is subject to clawback" Confirmed [S6]. For executive directors, clawback can apply for up to 10 years Confirmed [S7].

KEY TERM

Malus: cancelling a bonus that has been awarded but not yet paid. Clawback: recovering a bonus already paid.

A senior banker's bonus awarded in year 0

Sources: S6, S7 (Confirmed). Durations vary by role; shown for a senior risk-taker.

Staff are owners, by design

"All employees are eligible for, and the majority receive, long-term share incentives", "designed to give our people a sense of ownership" Confirmed [S7]. At 31 March 2026, staff share trusts held 8.0% and 5.8% of Investec Limited Confirmed [S5]. The schemes exist "to promote an esprit de corps... by allowing all staff to share in the risks and rewards of the Group" Confirmed [S5]. Some trust shares fund future awards, so they overstate what staff own today Inferred.

Credit decisions need everyone to agree

"All credit committees include voting members who are independent of the originating business unit. All decisions to enter into a transaction are based on unanimous consent" Confirmed [S6]. Investec lends to "clients we know and understand", assessing "character, integrity" and track record, and originates loans "mainly with the intent of holding these assets to maturity, thereby developing a 'hands-on' and long-standing relationship" Confirmed [S6]. Holding to maturity means keeping a loan until it is repaid rather than selling it on, so the banker lives with it for its whole life.

Growth is chosen by return on capital

Investec manages to a return target, not a size target: "the upper end of our target range by FY2030" through "dynamic capital management" Confirmed [S1]. History fits: it sold its Australian bank in 2014 Reported [S47], demerged its asset manager as Ninety One in 2020 Reported [S40], and swapped UK wealth for the Rathbones stake in 2023 Confirmed [S46]. When a business cannot earn its capital, Investec exits or partners Inferred.

Levers: S6, S7, S8, S5 (Confirmed). Effect on behaviour is the author's inference Inferred.

WORTH ASKING ABOUT

One tension: EVA is measured team by team, which can breed silos that work against "One Investec" cross-referral. Investec does list "the level of cooperation and collaboration fostered" as a pay factor Confirmed [S6]. Ask in interview how collaboration is rewarded in practice.

PART 6

What is genuinely different, and what is not

Rivals say "relationship" too, so the bundle is what differs.

Many UK banks make the same promise

Rival	What it says	Source
Arbuthnot Latham	"Relationships are at the heart of our approach"	S26 Confirmed
Close Brothers	"deep expertise, consistent service, and long-term relationships" and "fast lending decisions"	S28 Reported
C. Hoare & Co	Being small means "decisions can be made quickly"	S29 Reported
HSBC UK	Referrals from its commercial bank to its private bank rose 8% in 2025	S30 Confirmed

What is genuinely rare

Investec calls itself "the only integrated and diversified mid-market focused specialist bank, providing the capabilities of global investment banks to the corporate mid-market" [C, its own claim] [S24]. The fair version is narrower. Lenders like Close Brothers, Shawbrook and OakNorth do not offer stock-market advice. Brokers like Peel Hunt have no lending balance sheet. Private banks like Coutts and Hoare's have no investment bank. Investec can lend to a founder's company, act as its stock-market broker and bank the founder personally, in one mid-sized firm Inferred.

Three further differences hold up. It targets wealth creators Reported [S17]. It has made an open bet on people over automation: Financial Mail summed up Titi's five-year plan as "smart humans on tap, not chatbots" [C, headline] [S43]. And it came through 2008 without a state rescue, in Koseff's words: "Seven of the 10 big UK banks had to get a government bailout. We survived that crises without any help from anyone" [C that he said it; his own figure] [S38].

Where Investec is ordinary or weaker

Sources: S1, S31, S33, S34, S35, S36 (Confirmed). Measures differ (ROE vs RoTE; adjusted vs underlying). Not like-for-like.

Sources: S1, S32, S30, S31 (Confirmed). OakNorth reports an "efficiency ratio"; definitions differ slightly. Lower is leaner.

- UK momentum is soft. FY27 is the "peak investment year", UK return on tangible equity is guided at 12.5% to 13.5% Confirmed [S1], and UK half-year profit is expected 2% to 6% lower Confirmed [S25].
- Not the leader in private-banking service awards. Arbuthnot Latham won WealthBriefing's Best UK Private Bank Overall and Client Service in 2025 and 2026 [C, self-reported] [S27]; Euromoney's 2025 UK best private bank was Standard Chartered Confirmed [S37].
- Entrepreneurial culture can overreach. Investec bought UK subprime lender Kensington in 2007 for about £283m just before the crisis; the share price fell from about R104 to R27 by 2009 Confirmed [S38]. Kensington was sold in 2014 for about £180m Reported [S39].
- Some strengths are really about business mix. Investec's UK motor finance provision is £30m against about £320m at Close Brothers Confirmed [S1, S36]. That mostly reflects a much smaller motor book, not better ethics Inferred.
- Rathbones carries live risk. In June 2026 Rathbones disclosed a regulator-prompted review and about £60m of remediation Reported [S41]. It now runs the money behind Investec's new advice offer Inferred.
- Staff reviews are good but typical. Glassdoor about 4.1 to 4.2 out of 5; praise for a "flat hierarchy", complaints about slow change and progression [R, anecdote] [S42].

Genuinely distinctive	Ordinary, shared or weaker
The bundle in one mid-sized firm Inferred	"Relationship banking" claimed by Arbuthnot, Close, Hoare's, Coutts [C/R]
Clients chosen for building wealth Reported	Not the award leader in UK private banking Confirmed
EVA bonus pools, deferred and clawable Confirmed	UK cost-to-income 54% vs 26-36% at lean rivals Confirmed
Unanimous credit committees with independent voters Confirmed	UK returns below Shawbrook, Coutts, Barclays PB Confirmed
No state rescue in 2008 (Koseff's claim) Confirmed	Kensington showed overreach Confirmed
"Smart humans, not chatbots" [C headline]	Savings arm draws "no way to talk to anyone" complaints [anecdote]

PART 7

How to say it in an interview

Lines you can use, and traps to avoid.

Three lengths

10 SECONDS

"Investec picks ambitious clients and serves the person and their business through one banker, and its pay and credit rules reward long-term, risk-aware work rather than volume."

45 SECONDS

"What struck me is that Investec's relationship model is built into its plumbing. Bonus pools come from economic value added, so a team that wins business with capital-heavy, risky deals doesn't grow its pot. Big bonuses are deferred into shares and can be clawed back, most staff own shares, and every credit committee needs unanimous consent, which goes back to the founders' veto. Lots of banks say relationship. Investec pays for it."

2 MINUTES

"Many UK banks say they build relationships, so that alone isn't it. What is rare is the bundle: Investec can lend to a founder's company, act as its broker, where it has been the top-ranked small and mid-cap broker four years running, and bank the founder personally, now with Rathbones running the money behind Investec's advice. The 2026 plan pushes that further with current accounts for private clients and a corporate bank that is meant to feel like private banking. The honest test is cost: UK costs are 54% of income and returns are below Shawbrook and Coutts, so the next three years show whether relationships turn into returns at scale."

Traps

Do not say	Say instead
"Investec is unique because it does relationship banking"	"The combination of businesses is rare; the relationship claim is shared"
"Investec doesn't sell"	"It sells through a relationship, and pays on risk-adjusted profit, not volume"
"Investec has the best private bank"	"It targets wealth creators; Arbuthnot leads the service awards"
"They never make mistakes"	"Kensington in 2007 is the lesson; selling it and Australia in 2014 showed discipline"

Questions that show you understood

1. How is collaboration between private and corporate bankers rewarded, given bonus pools are measured by team EVA?
2. With Investec now leading the advice relationship and Rathbones running the money, how does a private banker's day change?
3. What would tell you by FY28 that the high-touch model is lifting UK returns towards the target range?
4. How does a unanimous credit committee work in practice when a relationship manager is keen on a deal?

What could not be found

- No published UK figures for cross-selling, client retention, client satisfaction (NPS) or repeat borrowers. "Integration" remains Investec's claim, not a measured fact.
- No current figure for staff ownership of Investec plc (only Investec Limited).
- The 2025 and 2026 group remuneration reports could not be retrieved; pay design is from the 2024 reports and a 2026 share-award notice.
- investec.com web pages block automated reading; some Investec wording comes from search snippets and is tagged Reported.
- UK private-client targets conflict between sources (about +5,000 clients vs 16,000 households).
