

PART 13

Cheat sheet

Two pages to read on the morning: the numbers, the talking points, the say and don't-say lines, the questions to ask, and the one-page composure card. Taken from Part 13 of the Complete Interview Pack; [Sxx] markers resolve in its Part 15.

13.1 The morning page

Round 2: two separate one-hour interviews, Joe (team member) and Chris (Head of the Desk), scheduled by Jessica Cresswell, Campus Recruiter. Round 1 passed on 7 September with Katherine Hayes and Oliver Harvey. Figures as of 17 September 2026. C = confirmed, R = reported (press estimate), I = inferred.

WHAT MILLENNIUM IS (THREE SENTENCES)

Millennium is a private multi-manager hedge fund founded in 1989 by Izzy Englander, with assets of over $92bn on its own site and about $97bn per Bloomberg, roughly 6,700 to 6,900 staff and over 350 independent investment teams [S71][S70][S400]. It allocates investor capital to those teams under hard loss limits, passes its costs through to investors, and sells them a steady return that barely moves with markets: about 14% a year with one losing year since 1989 [S111][S115]. It sold a first outside stake in November 2025 and on 1 October 2026 closes $22bn of new commitments, with Jain Global and Albar now exclusive to the platform [S82][S400][S407].

WHY THIS DESK EXISTS (TWO SENTENCES)

Hundreds of independent PM teams all want time with company management, and since 2014 in the UK and 2018 across the EU that time has been a priced, rationed, compliance-controlled service [S180][S185]. The teams compete and do not share, so one desk turns their confidential demand into one voice to the market and one fair allocation back, and proves with data which access was worth its cost.

The numbers and facts that matter

17	82% cite one-on-one company meetings in the broker vote, the top item; Millennium's vote is semi-annual	Greenwich via Acuity [S186]; Tokyo posting [S43]	R / C
18	£7.29m Einhorn and Greenlight fine (2012) over one broker-arranged call; declining to be wall-crossed was no defence	Jones Day [S19]	C
19	10 Sep 2026 Upper Tribunal upheld the FCA ban on Crispin Odey; fine £1,529,374. Conduct enforcement is live	FCA [S413]	C
20	Round 1 intelligence: saying no to PMs is the hardest part (Katherine); organisation is half the job (Ollie); conference season is the peak; colour-coding for life; broker events often one seat per firm; origination takes years; the culture is polite	Your Round 1 debrief, 7 Sep 2026	Heard first-hand

Reading the room (first three minutes)

Chris's hour: expect the desk as a business: scale, priorities, trade-offs, the rule under pressure. Answer in mechanisms and in his vocabulary; admit gaps; hold the frame on seniority.

Joe's hour: expect the mechanics: the request list, the portal, confirmations, the day. Answer in steps, with the record at the centre.

Either: if a scenario arrives, run the protocol: steady, sort, act, close.

Logistics

Reply to Jessica Cresswell promptly and briefly; give your real availability and answer the competing-offers question honestly. Test the video link the day before. One page of notes off-camera. Say their names on hand-over. If audio drops, say so calmly. Ask about the programme length and next steps at the end of the second hour.

13.2 The lines, the questions and the room

Say this

"Millennium is built as hundreds of independent, tightly-risked teams turned into one steady return by a centre that is bigger than the investment side. That structure creates the desk: the teams can't coordinate meetings themselves, so someone has to turn their confidential demand into one voice to the market and a fair allocation back."

"A no from the desk is never just a no. It is an allocation with an alternative attached: the rule in one line, the alternative already secured, and a path to re-open it that isn't me. The consumption report is what makes the no credible, because the PM can see what the desk did get him. Trust is built in the noes."

"The desk's client base is growing faster than the desk: 350-plus teams, $22bn closing on 1 October, external managers joining. That is a process and data problem, which is what an intern can help with."

"Flat August, eight per cent for the year against a market up more: the product is the drawdown profile, not the headline number."

Saying no to a PM: the five moves

1. Acknowledge the cost to the book; do not apologise for the rule.
2. The rule, in one line. Never who else got it, never why they ranked higher.
3. The alternative, already secured: group slot, IR call, next conference, a note if permitted.
4. Escalation path: "If you want it looked at again, I'll take it to Chris now."
5. Stay in the relationship: same tone tomorrow; log it; show the consumption report.

Don't say this

- A precise AUM, fee, pod threshold or the desk's rules as fact.
- "Best hedge fund in the world." Three rivals beat it in 2025.
- "MiFID II banned corporate access." It changed how it is paid for.
- The canteen story first. Lead with the email and AI story.
- "Talking to Anthropic about deals." Say the partnership as announced.
- Athens, Geneva or any named PM. Anything about the interviewers' private lives.
- Anything implying you plan to move to the investing side.

Questions to ask (two or three per hour)

For Chris:

1. What does the desk have to solve in the next two years to serve many more teams without losing the record or the service?
2. How is the allocation rule communicated to the team that loses, and how often is a no escalated to you?
3. How has the balance between broker-sourced and originated meetings shifted in EMEA, and where do you want it?
4. Payment optionality covers research but corporate access was ruled out of scope. Has that changed how brokers behave toward the desk?

For Joe:

5. What does a week in conference season look like on the desk, hour by hour?
6. What in the portal or the consumption report would you change if you had an intern for ten weeks?
7. How do you keep the record when requests arrive by chat, email and in person on the same day?
8. What did the last intern do that made your job easier?

CHAPTER 13A

The composure card, on one page

The protocol, what wins when things collide, and the never list.

The cheat sheet, on one page

1. STEADY

Breathe out. Repeat the situation back.
One clarifying question if it matters.

2. SORT

Name the priority that decides it.
"What I can't do is..."

3. ACT

Two or three steps, who you tell, when.
Reversible now; escalate the irreversible.

4. CLOSE

One sentence on prevention or follow-up.
Then stop talking.

WHAT WINS WHEN THINGS COLLIDE

- Rules and the firm's name: inside info, restricted names, how access is paid, confidentiality.
- Fair service to every team: a rule you could explain to the loser; never tell B what A asked.
- The process and the record: portal, log, confirmations, consumption data.
- Speed. Real, but only inside 1 to 3.

"I'd want to be fast for the PM, but the thing that decides this is [level], so I'd [action] and tell [person] now."

NEVER, WHATEVER THE PRESSURE

Tell one team what another asked for, holds, or thinks.
Decide a contested allocation alone. Escalate it.
Skip the record because someone senior said so.
Judge for yourself whether something was inside information.
Guess a fact you don't know. "I don't know; here's my reasoning."
Badmouth a PM, a broker, a company or a past employer.

WHEN THEY PUSH

Interrupted: stop, restate the new fact, re-sort. Contradicted: "Which part wouldn't work?" then hold or update on merits. Silence: two seconds, then "want me to go deeper on any part?"
Escalated: slow down, lower pitch, "here's what I can do now and who I'm bringing in." "Who are you to say no?": "You're right, it isn't my call; that's why I'd take it to..."
False choice: "I'd do neither: [third path]." Knowledge trap: "Not public; here's how I'd reason, and I'd check the rule day one." Badmouth bait: decline warmly.

Twisted scenario: "That changes the timing but not the order." Changing action for a new fact is judgement; changing priorities for a frown is a broken frame.

Body: exhale before speaking; speak 10% slower than them; hands still; pen and paper off camera; correct yourself out loud if you slip.

LINES TO HAVE READY

"The desk is the firm's single point of consumption for corporate access."
"Hundreds of independent clients, one neutral desk. The neutrality is the product."
"The record isn't admin: it's the compliance evidence and the broker-vote evidence."
"Since 2014 UK managers can't pay for access with commission; it's paid separately."
"Booking windows open four to six weeks out and fill fast; the deadline is the headline."
"Group formats and multiple levels of management are how a desk stretches scarce access."
"Not my job to decide if it was inside information; my job is that compliance knows within the hour."
"I'd own it in one sentence rather than have it come out later."

NUMBERS, IF THEY COME UP (say "roughly")

350+ investment teams; 6,670 staff, about 54% not investing [S71][S392].
~$92bn; 5% a quarter withdrawals since 2018; callable commitments since 2024 [S382][S364].
One down year since 1989 (2008, about -3%) [S377]. 2025 +10.5%; 2026 to Aug +8.2% [S127][S130].
Three regional desks: Americas, EMEA, APAC; two channels: broker-sourced, originated [S43][S40].
Semi-annual broker vote; one-on-ones are the most tracked item in votes (82%) [S43][S39].
PS14/7: 2 June 2014. MiFID II: 3 January 2018. Greenlight fine 2012: over £7m [S2][S13][S19].
Interview: Monday 7 Sep, 10:00-10:30 BST, Webex, two interviewers, Round 1.

Don't volunteer numbers. Have them for when asked.

IF YOU ONLY REMEMBER ONE THING

They are not testing whether you know the answer. They are testing whether your thinking stays in order when they push. Same four steps, same priority order, same tempo, every scenario. Say what you don't know. Escalate what isn't yours to decide. Never leak across teams. Own mistakes in one sentence. Then stop talking.

Your question at the end (pick one): how the desk handles ten teams wanting the same one-on-one; whether external managers such as Jain Global are served on the same footing as internal teams; what a good consumption report actually decides.

Everything on this page is a scaffold. The interviewers will hear whether it is yours. Rehearse out loud twice, then put it away.
